Use of DW content in MediaEval Benchmark Initiative 2016

The MediaEval Benchmark Initiative 2016 [<http://www.multimediaeval.org/mediaeval2016/>] will include a challenge (in future referred to as: "the Challenge") for personal identification in audio-visual content (face recognition et al.). For this purpose - and this purpose only - Deutsche Welle (DW) will provide the organisations, companies and individuals that participate in the Challenge (in future referred to as : "participants") with access to fifty (50) hours of audio-visual content at DW's own discretion provided that

1. all participants who process and use the supplied DW content acknowledge that the DW content will only be used within the Challenge and must not be used for any other purpose, including (but not limited to) commercial, scientific or other non-commercial purposes;
2. all participants who process and use the supplied DW content will always follow the relevant German, European and international rules and regulations (e.g. with regard to privacy, data protection and copyright) when processing and using this content;
3. any presentation of the Challenge results in which it becomes evident that material supplied by DW has been used and is shown or displayed (e.g. screenshots, images etc) will include the following copyright notice:

© Deutsche Welle (and/or respective copyright holders) Not for commercial use. No duplication, copying, re-use, alterations, modifications of any kind allowed. Made available for research purposes only.

4. all participants who plan to process and use the supplied DW content will acknowledge these terms and conditions in writing (email to tim.koch@dw.com is sufficient) before they gain access to that DW content. Those participants not agreeing to the terms and conditions laid out herein will under no circumstances get access to any content provided by DW for the Challenge (e.g. by one participant passing it on to another, with the recipient not having agreed to these Terms and Conditions).
